

ExecHealth Enters into Agreement with Harvard Medical School's Major Teaching Affiliates

Ottawa, June 3, 2010. – ExecHealth announced today that it has entered into an agreement with Boston-based Partners International Medical Services, a division of Partners HealthCare. Partners HealthCare is the leading academic medical network in the United States and includes Harvard Medical School's major teaching affiliates: the Massachusetts General Hospital, Brigham and Women's Hospital, Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, McLean Hospital, and Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital.

"It is an honor to be affiliated with Partners HealthCare," said Sanjay Shah, ExecHealth's Founder and President. "This relationship will enable us to provide our clients with an enhanced level of expertise and service. ExecHealth clients requiring additional diagnosis, second opinions, treatment for complex disease or major surgery now have access to leading specialists and technology at these world class facilities".

"The Partners Hospitals serve international patients who require specialized diagnosis and complex treatment for cancer, cardiovascular disease, mental health issues and other serious medical conditions. Our new affiliation with ExecHealth will facilitate timely access for Canadians who are seeking leading specialists, clinical trials or state-of-the-art technology in Boston," added Jay Pieper, President of Partners International Medical Services and Vice President of Partners HealthCare.
